TWO HELD OVER.

Anderson and Goldsworthy Are Placed Under Bond.

The Examining Trial of Empire Prisoners Concluded Friday.

The trial of the five men charged with the shooting at Empire Coal Mines Oct. 26 was concluded Friday afternoon.

Ed Goldsworthy and Ellis Deckard were released early in the trial. At the close of the examination, which occupied five days, Judge Cansler dismissed the charges against Geo. Phillips and held over Jim Will Anderson under a bond of $1,500 and Will Goldsworthy under a bond of $500.

Both men gave bond Saturday evening and all of the live prisoners returned to their homes.

The speeches of the attorneys for the prisoners, at least two of them, were very bitter.

Judge Yost was severe in his criticism of the deputies who were sent to Empire to restore order and also strongly censured Jailer Williamson and other county officials. He roundly abused the Empire Coal Company and demanded the release of the men as a much persecuted set of laborers, in a struggle between labor and capital.

Mr. R. Y. Thomas, of Greenville, was even less guarded in his utterances than Judge Yost and his abuse of witnesses came very near to involving him in personal difficulties in one or two instances. He referred to Officer George Lander as a "puppet of the Empire Company." Officer Lander understood him to say "puppy" and a personal altercation was only averted after they left the court room by a timely explanation by Judge Yost, who acted as peace-maker.

Mr. Chas. H. Bush, who was also on that side, made a speech along entirely different lines, dealing with questions of law and evidence and avoided a course that was calculated to prove hurtful to his clients.

MRS. M. M. CAVANAUGH

SLAUGHTER OF SWINE.

Trial Set for Thursday.

The examining trial of Henry Davis, the slayer of Jerry Wilson at Hinkleytown on the 10th inst., is set for next Thursday.

FATAL RIOT.

Pitched Battle Waged Between Miners and Strikers at Providence.

Six Men Shot and State Troops Hurried to the Scene Sunday Night.

As the result of an attack Sunday morning by a band of about seventy-five armed union miners on the nonunion miners and guards employed by the Providence Coal Company, in Webster county, one man was killed, another was fatally wounded and three men were seriously wounded, while one man, who is believed to be the leader of the attacking party, is reported to have been killed, and many persons had narrow escapes from death.

The shooting continued about two hours. Troops are now on the scene, and no further trouble is anticipated at present.

The Dead.

Garrett Givens, a union miner. Reported Killed.

Artie Oates.

Fatally Wounded.

Bud Couch, a union miner.

Seriously Wounded.

John West, nonunion miner. Shot in the thigh.

Morton Bush, nonunion miner. Shot in the shoulder.

Hutch Dawson, nonunion miner. Shot in both arms.

The Battle Begins.

The trouble commenced at 6 o'clock, when a company of about seventy-five armed union men appeared on a hill about four hundred yards from the slope mine of the Providence Coal Company and began firing on the tipple. At the first fire the guards were aroused, and immediately prepared to resist the attack. They were soon joined by many of the non-union miners, and the fire of the attacking was returned.

Guards Repulsed.

The attacking party continued to fire on the tipple, and the guards and nonunion miners were forced to run and seek shelter elsewhere, as the bullets were falling all around them. Many of the guards sought refuge in the homes of the nonunion miners. Others hid behind box cars and coal cars and again began firing at the men on the hill. This time the fire seemed too hot for the attacking party, and they sought shelter in an old ravine. From this position they opened fire on the residences of the nonunion negro miners at the foot of the hill.

The negro women and their children were forced to leave the houses and run for their lives to escape the bullets of the union men, who were firing as fast as they could reload.

Charged the Rioters.

Finding that their fire had little effect on the union miners, the guards and nonunion miners began to advance on them, hoping to make them stampede, but as they advanced the union miners poured another heavy fire into them and they were again forced to seek shelter, this time behind a pile of coal slack, where they again opened fire on the strikers. The men in the ravine continued to shoot at the homes of the nonunion miners. As the occupants fled the fire of the strikers was centered on them, but none of them was injured.

Many of the nonunion miners tried to escape the bullets by hiding under their houses, but one man who sought shelter there was struck by a bullet of a forty-four caliber and seriously wounded.

Re-enforcements Arrive.

In the meantime re-enforcements for the guards and nonunion miners arrived, and they joined in the firing. The entire party concentrated their fire on the men in the ditch, and it became so hot at the attacking party attacked that they had to stop and other places of safety. Two men were now all that remained in the ditch, and several men in one of the houses centered their fire on them.

For a few minutes the fire was returned, but presently one was heard to scream. His rifle, which he held in his hands, fell to the ground, and he fell with a bullet in his head. The other man continued to return the fire of the guards. When the man in the ditch screamed the leader of the attacking party came from his hiding place and attempted to pull the man out. Failing in this, he picked up the rifle and returned to his hiding place. Only one man continued to fire from the ditch. For several minutes he returned the shots of the guards.

Presently he ceased, and again the leader of the attacking party came from his hiding place and attempted to carry the man away with him. But before he could do so a bullet struck him and he fell to the ground. He yelled to his companions that he was shot, and several ran forward and in the face of the heavy fire of the guards they carried him from the field. A few minutes after the leader fell the fire of the attacking party ceased.

Dying Man Found.

The guards and nonunion men, after waiting a few minutes, went up the hill. There in the ditch lay one man with a bullet in his breast, calling for help. A little further they found the body of a negro with a bullet in his head. The rest of the attacking party were not to be seen. A number of the guards and nonunion men started out in pursuit of the strikers, hoping to capture them, but after a chase which lasted an hour they returned to the mines without having seen one of them.

The guards then returned to the foot of the hill and, entering a negro boarding house, found two men badly wounded. Under the house they found another man wounded. In a lot near the mines lay one horse and two mules dead, while three others were dying.

Troops Hurried To The Scene.

A hurried call was made for troops and Maj. E. B. Bassett left Sunday night with 27 members of Co. D., all that could be found in the city. These under command of Capt. H. P. Thomas reached Madisonville at 11:30 and joined the Brasher Rifles, the local company under Capt. Walter Powers. Wagonettes were in readiness to carry a detachment of twenty men to Providence, the scene of the fight, and the soldiers, under the command of Capt. Thomas, were hurried to the front. The soldiers will remain indefinitely.

Yesterday morning Lieut. Geo. W. Phelps left with ten more members of Co. D. There are 43 in all, and the two or three missing are expected out of town and will join their company as soon as they hear of the call and are ready.

A DIVORCE CHART.

States of the Union Where the Law Is Lenient.

An enterprising publishing firm has put on the market a new document. It is nothing less than a divorce chart of the United States from which unhappy couples can quickly learn in what state they can get separated with the greatest celerity and ease, says the Salt Lake Herald.

"By a mere glance," it explains, "the particular information sought may be obtained. The form and manner in which the laws are placed before the reader are as simple of comprehension for the layman as they are for the lawyer."

The chart, it is to be feared, will do much to put a damper on the divorce industry of South Dakota, Idaho, Nebraska and Nevada are equipped with just as rapid-fire divorce laws as the more widely-advertised state. In fact, they beat South Dakota on one very material point, for while the latter state does not permit the remarriage of a guilty defendant the other three lay no restrictions on either party. They also require less notice of an action than South Dakota, contrive causes just as liberally and demand no longer residence.

But easy divorces can be had in the east just as well as in the west. State of Connecticut, Maine and Delaware, both themselves not about (fear) of residence, so long as the cause of divorce is their own. They even provide a special form of divorce. In persons divorcing in person.

South Carolina is the most lenient state of all to the wretched divorcee. The laws there are strict, to the verge of blindness. But in the majority of states this interesting chart shows that to a couple so minded one can be very easily obtained, and in some the untying of the knot is not more difficult than the tying.

HARD UPON ABORIGINES.

Woe Wrought by Diseases and Vices of Civilization.

The injurious influence of "civilization" upon aborigines has been shown in a good many cases within recent years, and is now being one more witnessed in Alaska. The decline in the numbers of the natives of the Aleutian islands is most remarkable. Where there were formerly about 120 villages, with a total population of from 1,500 to 2,500 persons there are now not more than ten villages, while the population has declined to 1,000 individuals, and only 700 of this number are full-blooded natives. This strong tendency to extinction of native populations has been most strikingly exemplified at Hawaii and Australasia, where tribes were often annihilated in a few years by their inability to resist the diseases and vices of civilization. In the Aleutian islands a large portion of the recent deaths are ascribed to measles and consumption—both unknown until a few years ago. The population of Alaska is rapidly growing, having about doubled from 1890 to 1900, and as the native element has dwindled, the increase of the white settlers must have been much more than 100 per cent. Similar changes are in progress in Hawaii.—N. Y. Post.

A GEOLOGICAL FALLACY.

Some People Believe Oil and Gas Can Be Found Anywhere.

Probably the most wild and unjustifiable of all the crude beliefs respecting geological resources is that which holds to the conviction that by going deep enough the drill is sure to find something of value, no matter what point the work of boring is commenced. There are numerous persons in every community, estimable, influential, and in the highest degree public spirited, who are convinced that the question, for example, of finding coal in their special locality, is simply a matter of the depth to which the explorations are carried. Rock oil and natural gas are recognized as desirable products in every progressive community, and every such community contains persons, in either respects intelligent, who are ready to stake their own fortune and that of their nearest friends on the belief that oil and gas are everywhere underneath the surface, and that their sources can be tapped with the drill, provided only there is sufficient capital to keep up the process of drilling long enough.—Mine and Minerals.

A Grievous Grievance.

Every man has about one grievance that springs up never he has half a dozen.

HOPE BLUE DIAMOND.

Its Present Owner, Lord Francis Hope, Is Not Authorized to Dispose of the Gem.

There is a full-sized reproduction of the famous Hope blue diamond, which is again being brought into prominence by the fact that the present owner, Lord Francis Hope, obtained an order of the court authorizing him to sell the jewel. On account of its size, color and interesting history, this diamond is considered unique among its kind, and is one of the world, and excepting those belonging to European or eastern royalties. The jewel, which is now set

THE HOPE BLUE DIAMOND.
(Recent Court Order Granting Privilege of Disposing of It.)

In the form of a brooch, is of a deep sapphire blue, and of the greatest brilliancy and purity; no other diamond of this rich color has ever been discovered.

It is believed that this gem is part of the same stone which weighed in the rough 112 carats, and was bought in India, in 1666, by a French Jew, a well-known French traveler and merchant. It was sold by him to Louis XIV, and continued to be one of the jewels of the French crown until 1792, when it was seized by the revolutionists and deposited in the Garde Meuble. It was, however, stolen from there in a very short time and disappeared from all knowledge until 1830, when the stone shown in the photograph came into the hands of a Mr. Eliason and was eventually bought by Henry Thomas Hope, Connoisseur at once pronounced it to be the stolen stone brought from India by M. Tavernier, but went so far as to render identification difficult. Contrary to some rumors in the states, the jewel is now, and has for many years past been, deposited at Paris, bank, in Carondelet square, London.

Now that Lord Francis Hope is at length at liberty to sell the jewel, it will be curious to know how much it will fetch, as it is reported to be worth untold sums. It seems most probable that it will either be purchased by wealthy American or sent back to the land of its birth as the property of an Indian prince.

WILLIAM D. WASHBURN.

Famous Minnesota Man Elected Head of the National Organization of University.

William Drew Washburn, of Minnesota, who has just been elected president of the Universal fraternal convention by the delegates at Buffalo, is one of the wealthiest manufacturers in America and a well-known citizen of Minneapolis, where his large flour mills are located. Mr. Washburn has participated in political life since 1861, when he was appointed United States attorney general of Minnesota. He was subsequently elected to Congress for three terms, and in 1889 was House United States senator, his term expiring in 1903. Like his late associate in business, former Gov. Edmund D. Washburn, he was born in New England, and spent his early years in a hard struggle for success. He settled in Minnesota in 1857, and took a large part in the railway construction of the northwest. He served as president of the Minneapolis, St. Paul & Sault Ste. Marie railway until that road was well on the way to its completion, and then retired from its active management. Mr. Washburn is 60 years old.

Greens Carried by Insects. If material is conveyed by mosquitoes it is probable that other insects may play a like part. A French physician records that a certain family had a member who for years was subject to frequent material attacks, and that three children in the family were seized with the disease directly after some cleaners were brought into the house. The malarial germ was found in lice on the plaques.

Demographics in America. Attempts for census taken in 1900 cities of the United States are able to supply the following figures:

EXPERIENCE WITH REPORTER.

A Distinguished Danish Actor Tells of an Interview.

Herr Elith Reumert, the noted Danish actor, who visited the United States this summer, tells this story of his experience with a Chicago reporter.

"I had just arrived in Chicago, after a fatiguing journey, when the bellboy brought me a card stating that Mr. M. of the Clarion would be infinitely grateful to me if I would grant him an interview. Never before nor since have I met such an interviewee. Here are some of the questions he asked me: 'What do you think of the coming races?'

'What is your opinion of the steel strike?'

"Do you not think that the local professor who said that Mr. Rockefeller is a greater man than Shakespeare is utterly wrong?'

"I replied as best I could to these questions, but when I asked me what I thought of your country's foreign policy I grew slightly nervous, and mildly informed him that I really was unable to venture an opinion on such a subject; and that I thought he had already material enough for a book, to which he replied: 'Yes, I know; but you see, I am a space man and want to get in as much stuff as possible,' and he began again. Finally, after thanking me for my courtesy, and promising me to 'fix things all right,' I got rid of him.

"Of course I believed him, and the next morning lost no time in procuring a copy of his paper, for I naturally supposed that after such a terrible court of inquiry my interview would take up a column at the very least. To my amazement, however, I was unable to find it anywhere. I looked at the first page and then at the last; all in vain; and I was about to give up the search as a bad job, when, quite accidentally, I espied the following paragraph, sandwiched in between two medical advertisements:

"Herr Elith Reumert, the Danish character actor of the Royal theater, Copenhagen, arrived in this city last night. He expresses himself as delighted with Chicago, and says Bernhard is the greatest living actress."

SYMBOLS IN A CARPET.

Famous Weave Various Sentiments in Their Work.

During the Shah's last stay in Paris he paid a visit to the tie-dyers, where he showed a most appreciative interest in all that he saw. Before a remarkably fine Persian carpet, given to the monarch by M. Timpel, he remained for some time, interpreting to himself the symbolic meaning of the check which he had observed upon it, which, however, he failed to translate into French. A few days since the mystery was cleared up. There arrived in Paris the manager of the imperial carpet weaving factory in Teheran, who stated that he had been commissioned by the Shah to study the methods of manufacture in use at the Gobelins.

"To him the director applied for a solution of the legend of the check which had so surprised the Shah. Thereupon the Persian began to read a running translation: 'A carpet for the ruler of the earth; superiority for his feet; how beautiful it is, it is in his cabinet and knows his secrets. It is pleasant as Paradise, and brighter than the Academy of Mar (a Persian painter) for it contains all the colors of China. The nightingale coming to perch upon it cannot trifle itself away from its lovings. Neither winter nor summer can ever change the tint of the carpet.' This is a good deal for one carpet to signify, but critics say that it is justified in holding a high opinion of itself. It is about three centuries old.—London Pall Mall Gazette.

CLEVER THIEVES.

The Bihil, Bill Men of India, Know Many a Trick.

The cleverest thieves in the world are, in all probability, the Bihils, says the Cincinnati Enquirer, a tribe of hill men, who are found in the vicinity both in their stealing and in evading the police sent out to capture them.

They are very proud of their skill in pilfering, and openly boast of it. One of them once told a British officer that he could steal the blanket from under him, and was promptly challenged to show his ability.

That night, when the officer was fast asleep, the Bihil robber cut a hole in his tent, crept noiselessly in, and gently tickled the hands and feet of the sleeping man. The officer stirred uneasily and turned over. In this way the Bihil was able to pull the blanket out a little way. By repeating this performance he finally succeeded in "coaxing" the blanket completely from under the sleeper!

When engaged in his nefarious little games, the Bihil wears hardly any clothing, and his little body is rubbed with oil, to facilitate a escape from any would-be captors. When hotly pursued by the British troops, the robbers make use of a very clever device. They conceal their scant clothing under their small round shields and scatter them about to resemble stones or boulders. Then, picking up a few twigs—if there are any to be had—they assume all sorts of grotesque attitudes, their almost featureless limbs slightly resembling the charred limbs of a tree. Absolutely motionless they hold their positions till the enemy has passed them.

In this way the British subaltern, in charge of a party sent to capture some Bihils, was considerably startled one evening. The party had been completely lost sight of the robbers, and finally the party drew rein by a clump of guarded and bent tree trunks, tired and hot from their hard exertions. The officer in charge took off his hat and placed it on the end of a broken limb, when, instantly there was a wild scream of laughter, and the tree trunks suddenly came to life and vanished in the darkness.

UNIQUE BURGLAR ALARM.

Flashlight Photography for Exposing Criminals at Their Nearest Work.

"I was reading in one of the recent magazines an interesting article on photography and its usefulness in the courts," said an observant citizen to a New Orleans Times-Democrat reporter, "and I notice that two of the links in New York have been in an apparatus that will take the offender's picture in a jiffy. Now, this is a safe device. The very instant the safe door is tampered with a flasher is left on the plate and he never knows how it happens. Only two banks, according to reports, have adopted the plan, but no doubt it will spread, and after awhile will come to general use as a thief detector. It is simply the evolution of the camera gallery." But think of the limitless possibilities of photography along this line. After awhile the thief cannot enter any place without running into a flashlight and a plate, and he may not leave without leaving his likeness behind him. If he crawls into a window a fuse may flash up and leave his picture on the floor. If he forces a back door open a light may flare up in his face, and the police will catch him at once and find out just who he is by looking at the plate in the door. If he raps the fellow over the head with a bludgeon on the highway he may strike a blow, the fire will flare up, and the result will be his immediate identification. In short, the world may in time become so filled with photographing apparatus that the thief will not stand much show, unless he is willing to take the chances of being caught, because of the fact that the picture he leaves behind will not only identify him, but will tell the story of how he committed the act. It may be offered in proof to convict him. But there is another thing in connection with the possibilities of photography. Pictures may tell tales on folk more honest than thieves, for they may be used to tell the little things which are best untold, and so the sciences, which affording protection against criminals, may also become a miserable telltale."

He was returning home from his work just north of the city and when he reached the railroad he started down the track towards his home. A freight was doing some switching and Jessup, in order to get out of the way of the moving cars, stepped upon the main track when the passenger train came upon him and knocked him off.

His head and back were hurt, two ribs were broken and he also sustained internal injuries. He was unconscious when taken up and never rallied or spoke after being hit.

NEXT ATTRACTION.

"A Guilty Mother" at Opera House To-morrow Night.

A play that has been presented to the theatre goers of the East and West for the past five years and been given in almost every known tongue, will be produced here to-morrow night Nov. 20.

"A Guilty Mother," is claimed to be one of the best of the many very excellent dramas brought to this country: it is admirably constructed, replete with laughter, real heart episodes, brilliant stage pictures, and marvelous mechanical effects; these are all perfectly brought together in harmonious action.

"A Guilty Mother," has the great advantage over other productions in that it appeals with as much force to the gallery as the fashionable orchestra; this was conclusively proven in the last presentation of the play in New York, when both the Orchestra seats which were $1.50 each were crowded every night while the gallery which was 25 cents was filled to overflowing; as well; the production will be given here with the same excellent cast, and in the most minute detail exactly as at its several New York engagements.

Can you afford to experiment with unknown and untried brands of Fertilizers, when you can get right here what you know to be good? Soils are of great variety, what suits your farm may not be adapted to your neighbor's. Experimenting may mean the loss of a crop, as well as the amount invested in Fertilizers. Every farmer knows Armour and Homestead, Eagle and Ox Brand Fertilizers. They are no experiment. Its Time to Put in Your Order Now if you want it to come forward with shipments for Early Fall seeding.
